psychotronics

"Psychological Operations: Planned operations to convey selected information and indicators to foreign audiences to influence their emotions, motives, objective reasoning, and ultimately the behavior of foreign governments, organizations, groups, and individuals. The purpose of psychological operations is to induce or reinforce foreign attitudes and behavior favorable to the originator's objectives. Also called PSYOP. See also consolidation psychological operations; overt peacetime psychological operations programs; perception management. "US Department of Defense

subliminal message

Apparatus for superimposing visual subliminal instructional materials on a video signal

ABSTRACT: A subliminal video instructional device comprises circuitry for receiving a television signal, circuitry for generating a subliminal horizontal and vertical synchronization detection circuits, circuitry for generating a subliminal video message synchronized to the underlying video signal, and circuitry for adding the subliminal video message to the underlying video signal to create a combination video signal.

Silent Subliminal Presentation System

the Silent Sound Spread Spectrum (SSSS), sometimes called "S-spread" or "Sspread" was developed by Dr Oliver Lowery of Norcross, Georgia, and is described in US Patent #5,199,703, "Silent Subliminal Presentation System", dated October 27, 1992.
ABSTRACT: "A silent communication system in which nonaural signals are fed to the ear of a human subject, characterized in the adjacentmultaneous frequency spectrum are amplitude- or frequency-modulated with the desired intelligence and propagated acoustically or vibrationally, for inducement into the brain, typically through the use of loudspeakers, earphones, or piezoelectric transducers. The modulated carriers may be transmitted directly in real time or may be conveniently recorded and stored on mechanical, magnetic, or optical media for delayed or repeated transmission to the listener."

FCC - Federal Communications Commission

STATEMENT OF DR. JOHN KANAY, ASSISTANT TO THE DEPUTY CHIEF, MASS MEDIA BUREAU, FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, ACCOMPANIED BY CHARLES KELLEY, ENFORCEMENT DIVISION, MASS MEDIA BUREAU
The FCC first became concerned with subliminal projection techniques in 1956 after it learned about a New Jersey movie theater which flashed the words "Drink Coca-Cola" and "Hungry? Eat popcorn" on the screen for a subliminal level of one three-thousandth of a second during its film.
Although an increase in sales was reported, the theater refused to release any of the details of the experiment. The first broadcast case came in 1957 when television Station WTWO tested the technique by monitoring the reaction of viewers to flashes that stated "If you have seen this message, write WTWO."
Although the station received many responses, in 1958, researchers conducted an experiment for Television Station WTTV where viewers were subliminally told to "Watch Frank Edwards," a news analyst featured on the station. The researchers reported that the message had no statistically significant effect. (See Fleur and Petrovoff 23 Public Opinion Quarterly 168 (1959).)
In 1957, early in this period of experimentation, the FCC published a Notice of Inquiry and Proposed Rulemaking to deal with the issue of this area. At that time the Commission noted that subliminal messages only had been used by broadcasters for experimental purposes and that the broadcast industry trade association had announced its intention to review and consider any subliminal advertising proposals.
The 1957 notice clearly stated that the FCC considered the use of subliminal messages to be inappropriate by broadcasters. No further immediate action was judged necessary because licensees generally had shown disinterest in the matter. The National Association of Broadcasters amended its code to bar the use of these messages. Broadcasters interest in subliminal messages appeared to wane in the face of FCC policy statements, industry prohibitions and the lack of persuasive test results.
In 1973, the issue arose briefly when the FCC received complaints that television station had broadcast an ad which contained a subliminal message. The FCC staff sent an inquiry concerning the ad to the advertising agency which produced the advertisement had already dispatched telegrams to the stations informing them of the existence of the subliminal message and authorizing them to delete it.
Some stations, however, continued to broadcast the advertisement containing the "Out of" message. The FCC took the occasion to issue a public notice stating that it was concerned that the public believe that use of subliminal perception is inconsistent with the obligations of a licensee * * * Broadcasters employing such techniques are contrary to the public interest. Whether effective of not, such broadcasts clearly are intended to be deceptive." (Broadcast of Information by Means of "Subliminal Perception" Techniques 44 F.C.C.2d 1016 (1974).)

High-Tech Psychological Warfare

The March 23, 1991 newsbrief, "High-Tech Psychological Warfare Arrives in the Middle East", describes a US Psychological Operations (PsyOps) tactic directed against Iraqi troops in Kuwait during Operation Desert Storm. The manoeuvre consisted of a system in which subliminal mind-altering technology was carried on standard radiofrequency broadcasts. The March 26, 1991 newsbriefs states that among the standard military planning groups in the centre of US war planning operations at Riyadh was "an unbelievable and highly classified PsyOps program involving a new technology."
The opportunity to use this method occurred when Saddam Hussein's military command-and-control system was destroyed. The Iraqi troops were then forced to use commercial FM radio stations to carry encoded commands, which were broadcast on the 100 MHz frequency. The US PsyOps team set up its own portable FM transmitter, utilizing the same frequency, in the deserted city of Al Khafji. This US transmitter overpowered the local Iraqi station. Along with patriotic and religious music, PsyOps transmitted "rogue, confusing and contradictory military orders and information".

Bible and CIA

This CIA study, "A Bible Lesson on Spying," appeared in the Winter 1978 issue of the agency's classified spy journal, Studies in Intelligence. The study reviews the ethical and strategic lessons of spy missions ordered by Moses and Joshua to the Promised Land of Canaan.
http://www.parsonsque.com/dc/articles/cia0bible3study.htm
In fact, the CIA has infiltrated and utilized religious groups in operations in dozens of countries. Religious sentiments, Christian and otherwise, have been manipulated in many a CIA propaganda operation. Documented examples of such operations abound. To name just a few: In the early 1960s, the agency secretly rallied Catholic leaders in Latin America against Cuba's revolutionary government and Castro, an ancient sign of Christian resistance, as the symbol for anti-Castro rebellion.
During the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations the CIA funneled political action funds through church institutions in Chile, as part of efforts to oppose leftist leader Salvador Allende. To keep tabs on dissident movements and social activism in Bolivia, the CIA gathered intelligence from Protestant missionaries working among the poor there. In the early 1980s, the Nicaraguan contras, a CIA-backed rebel group, dropped leaflets bearing the images of Jesus Christ and the Pope along with messages exhorting the reader to choose between the church and communism.

neurophone (Patrick Flanagan, 1958)

The device converts sound into electrical impulses that propagate along the skin into the brain. (source: http://www.geocities.com/CapeCanaveral/Campus/2289/webpage.html. Site de Flanagan company : http://www.flanech.com/
Mega-in™ Crystal Energy®
Neurophone®
Amazing Food®

Edward Tilton, President of Silent Sounds, Inc. says this about S-sound in a letter dated December 13, 1996: "All attempts, however, have been classified by the US Government and we are not allowed to reveal the exact details..... we make tapes and CDs for the German Government, even the former Soviet Union countries! All with the permission of the US State Department, of course.. The system was used throughout Operation Desert Storm (Iraq) quite successfully."

project Bonfire

top-secret project Bonfire (1989)
damage the nervous system, alter moods, trigger psychological changes and even kill (William J. Broad, Judith Miller, "Defector tells of Soviet and Chinese Germ Weapons, April 3 1999, The New York Times)

top-secret project Bonfire (1989)
"in Kiev (and this is serious) the mass production ... of psychotronic biogenerators was launched. I can not assert that during the coup d'etat exactly the Kiev generators were used... All the same the fact that they were used is evident to me. What are the psychotronic generators? It is an electronic equipment producing the effect of guided control in human organism. It affects especially the left and right hemisphere of the cortex. This is also the technology of the U.S. project Pandora. It is based on the use of the resonance effect in human brain." (Institute for the Research of Materials. The laboratory of one of its sections is located in the living quarters of the city. There are located biogenerators produced by the Obninsk Factory. I am drawing on my personal experience and I can tell that I am myself the author of the model of such a generator. I completed my work in August 1990... Why the system failed in the days of the putsch? The putschists, having no experience, did not know, that to get the desired reaction the biogenerator should be tuned to the brain wave frequency of the person to be affected. (Victor Sedletsky, vice president of the League of Independent Scientists of the USSR, director of the Institute for the Research of Materials."The Authors of the project Zombie Discovered in Kiev", 1991 August 27, Komsomolskaya Pravda)

Chemical Warfare Laboratories, Edgewood

Between 1955 and 1975, the U.S. Army used 7,000 enlisted soldiers as human guinea pigs for experiments involving a wide array of lethal and chemical warfare agents. These tests were conducted jointly by the U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command and the Edgewood Arsenal research facility in Maryland. Approximately 3,500 of these soldiers were given doses of a portable battery-powered source of electrical and chemical stimuli. Volunteers' test subjects were not told which drugs they were given, and were not fully informed of the extreme physical and psychological effects these drugs would have on them.

Psywar Terror Tactics

war is a weapon just as surely as a rifle or a tank; if you frighten your enemy enough, you may defeat him without having to fight. Such is the logic behind psychological warfare -- a combat weapon that targets the mind. In full-fledged wars and quiet covert operations around the world, U.S. military and intelligence specialists have long practiced the art of intimidation through propaganda. Some of the most productive (and some of the most fanciful) psywar operations have been conducted in Southeast Asia and Latin America.
Much early U.S. psywar operation were conceived by a famous clandestine commander, Air Force Brigadier General Edward G. Lansdale (1909-1987). A firm believer in the efficacy of "psychological operations" (or PSYOP, for short -- the military's term for propaganda), Lansdale was a pioneering psywarrior.
Lansdale believed that the key asset of the psychological combatant is a thorough understanding of the target audience's beliefs and values. The memes and myths that shape a society's culture, he argued, must be exploited if a psywar campaign is to be effective. Lansdale applied his strategy ruthlessly in the Philippines, where he helped fix the 1951 presidential election during the early 1950s counterinsurgency campaign against the country's Huk rebels.
Lansdale made extensive provisions for anti-Contra propaganda in his Mongoose plans. His top secret planning document, now declassified, detail the use of "all media" in the campaign. Many of Lansdale's propaganda initiatives relied on the tried-and-true techniques of clandestine radio warfare, but some of his more grandiose psywar schemes approached the surreal. For instance, he proposed a campaign aimed at convincing Cuban peasants that the Virgin Mary was alive and then spark a revival by staging Jesus' return from the heavens. Lansdale's plan, which his colleagues dubbed "elimination by illumination," was to simulate the holy event by firing phosphorous shells into the sky above Havana. Though the anti-Castro/anti-Christ plan never came to fruition, the fact that it was considered at all by a U.S. military official is another indication of the important role supernatural themes can take in covert operation. Another foreign hotspot that Lansdale visited was the Belgian Congo, a mineral-rich region in the heart of the Republic of the Congo. The CIA and Defense Department deemed the country a test case for modern counterinsurgency methods, and financed numerous studies of Congolese society to probe the psychological strengths and weaknesses of the rebels. In October 1963, the U.S. military also invoked Christian themes in propaganda products disseminated during the invasion of Grenada. A PSYOP leaflet portrayed the Marxist leaders of Grenada's Provisional Revolutionary Military Council as the "Devil in Disguise" and the Apocalypse" - characters described in a chilling piece of prophecy from the book of Revelation.(Jon Elliston, Psywar Terror Tactics, http://www.parascope.com/)

Sensory and CIA

WITCHCRAFT, SORCERY, MAGIC AND OTHER PSYCHOLOGICAL PHENOMENA AND THEIR IMPLICATIONS ON MILITARY AND PARAMILITARY OPERATIONS IN THE CONGO
This report has been prepared in response to a query posed by ODCS/OPS, Department of the Army, requesting the description of witchcraft, sorcery, and magic by insurgent elements in the Republic of the Congo (ex-Leopoldville, Kinshasa, Zaire). It is felt that the psychological impact of these practices on their followers to do battle with Government troops. Rebel tribesmen are said to have been persuaded that they can be made magically impervious to Congolese army firepower. Their fear of the government has thus been diminished and, conversely, fear of the rebels has grown within army ranks. [...] Nor does the current situation in the Congo represent anything new in the history of insurgency insofar as the use of magical practices is concerned. History is replete with instances where such practices have been employed to good effect. In the Congo, Simon Ossa was led by a man who represented himself as the younger brother of Jesus Christ. The Boxer cultists believed that they could cause cannon to fall apart at great distances by psycho-kinetic means. those who took the Mau Mau oaths in Kenya were taught that oath violation would be instantly lethal. African history contains numerous other examples or similar phenomena (the "Mahdi-Mahdi" rebellion in Tanganyika, the Makomaba uprising in Portuguese East Africa, etc.). Current examples are the Lumpa uprising in Zambia and the Alice uprising in Northern Rhodesia today exemplify the same superstitious manifestation.
Any study of historical examples of uprisings supported by superstitious practices, however, will reveal that vigorous military counter-measures of a conventional nature have produced optimum results in suppressing the insurgency. If there are substantial political or economic motives behind the uprisings, these naturally must be taken into account. The reference here is to military tactics and their effects against magic.(http://www.parascope.com/)

Bible and CIA

Astron, Inc.
Private aerospace R&D corporation in the greater Washington D.C. area, noted for its specialized RF antennas CTEC, Inc.

private R&D corporation engaged in research on free energy devices and the mechanisms for interaction of EM fields and radiation with biological systems.

Raytheon E-Systems Inc

top secret project HAARP

HAARP
By the kind of manipulation of the ionosphere it is possible to bounce the electromagnetic waves back from the ionosphere to whatever region on the planet. The building of the system began in 1993 and is scheduled to end in 1997. It is a 250 million dollars in value out of which 1,8 billion were for classified projects. The whole project is financed by the American Navy and Air Force. The main patent of Bernard J. Eastlund (number 4,686,605) proposes the use of the system among others for destruction of navigation systems of airplanes and missiles changing the molecular composition of an atmospheric region, a wherever in the atmosphere, interference with all communication particular molecule or molecules can be chosen for increased communications or weather control (remember the CNN programme on Korean weather-war weapons), the global weather control the atmosphere could be artificially increased.

Project MKULTRA

MKULTRA
The report on MKULTRA subproject 94 issued in October 1960 read : "Initial biological work on techniques and brain locations essential to providing conditioning and control of animals has been completed...The feasibility of remote control of activities in several species of animals has been established and research programs are directed toward improvement of techniques."
(archives declassifiées de la CIA en ligne sur http://www.intelnet.org/mkultra/)

Project Pandora

America's first research program into microwave offensive, anti-personnel use of non-ionizing microwave radiation.

RetroPsychoKinesis Project

Cognitive Sciences Laboratory

For over 20 years, the Cognitive Sciences Laboratory (CSL) of Palo Alto was a highly classified sponsored parapsychology research in support of its intelligence program most recently known as STARGATE (source : www.heart7.net/mcf/hambone/places.html)

Grill Flame

Center Lane was the codename for the operational arm of the remote-viewing program, redesignated Grill Flame in 1983 (Stargate), redesignated from Sun Streak)

Fort Meade

Headquarters of the National Security Agency, and house facilities for FBMA. Home to the first remote-viewing operational units, called DT-5, codenamed Grill Flame (1978-83), Center Lane (1983-6), and possibly Sun Streak. (source: www.heart7.net/mcf/hambone/places.html)

Center Lane

Project Pandora

Psychotronics

Psychotronic Weapons

Psychotronic Warfare

Psychotronic Research

Psychotronic Research Institute

Psychotronic Research Institute Inc

Psychotronic Research Institute Inc

Psychotronic Research Institute Inc